June, with its roses—June!
The gladdest month of our capricious year,
With its thick foliage and its sunlight clear
And with the drowsy tune
Of the bright leaping waters, as they pass
Laughingly on amid the springing grass.

BUSINESS SPECIALS

Under this head notices are inserted for ten cents a line. Seven words to a line.

Golden Buttered Pop Corn can be bought Sunday afternoons and evenings at stand, on Cottage St. Bill, the Corn Man.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Crockett of New Haven, Ct., have been visiting Mrs. Crockett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Leavitt. Mr. Crockett returned to his home Tuesday, but his wife will remain for a longer visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Perry and daughter, Carlina, enjoyed a trip Sunday afternoon to Gorham, N. H., and through Pinkham Notch to Fryeburg, Bridgton and Harrison. Road construction in the Notch caused them trouble along with other motorists caught in the same trap.

The Misses Catherine and Addie Longley have arrived home from the Pennsylvania State College for the summer. They were accompanied by Miss Anna M. Cupples of Alton, Pa., who will enjoy the hospitality of the Longleys for ten days or more. She is delighted with this section of Maine.

Merl Hathaway of Providence, R. I., was called here this week by the serious illness of his father, George F. Hathaway. For twelve years Merl has been superintendent of an electric car barn, the headquarters of 112 motormen on this division. He started railroading on the Norway-Paris Street Railway.

A surprise birthday party was given Mrs. Bertha Lovejoy, at the home of Mrs. Robert Kimball, Tuesday afternoon. Among the guests were Mrs. Elwyn Russell, Mrs. Etta Lebroke, Mrs. Ida Ray, Mrs. Vira Kilgore, Mrs. Ida Poland and daughter, Mrs. Hazel Tucker and son, the hostess and the guest of honor. Mrs. Lovejoy was invited to Mrs. Kimball's and found the room filled with guests. After the congratulations were over, Mrs. Lovejoy was instructed to go on a hunt about the rooms, as gifts had been hidden in many places, and to each one was attached original verses. Later a lunch was served by the hostess.

Rev. Olin B. Tracy, formerly of Norway sent invitations to ninety-one couples he has married, for a reunion at Skowhegan last Sunday. Three couples from Norway attended the special service in the Federated church and lunch at the parsonage. They were Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCormack, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hunt and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hunt. There was a large attendance, and letters of good cheer from many states were read. Mr. Tracy said he wished to make this gathering an annual affair. An unsual thing is that among the ninety-one weddings, the divorce court has thus far untied only one.

The funeral of Frank P. Stone was held at his late home on Highland Avenue, Friday at 2 p. m., and conducted by Oxford Lodge, F. & A. M. Rev. Olin B. Tracy of Skowhegan, formerly of Norway and Rev. W. W. Lyon of the Norway Methodist church officiated. The home was open to friends from 11 a. m., to 1 p. m., and a large number including representatives of the Masonic bodies were present at the services. The honorary bearers were Stephen B. Cummings, Russell Gould, Charles Howard, William F. Jones, William C. Leavitt and Thomas Kimball. The bearers were Ernest B. Jackson, Eliot A. Fuller, Stuart W. Goodwin, Henry B. Foster, Donald B. Partridge, Fred E. Smith. Interment was in the family lot at Pine Grove cemetery. Relatives came from Gorham and Westbrook. Places of business were closed from 2 to 3 o'clock, during the hour of service.

Messenger Service Wanted

After the Trains Change Time

An endeavor is being made to secure messenger service to Mechanic Falls to care for the mail which would leave about 8 a. m., in place of the train service, which changes on June 28. Under the new management no mails would leave Norway in the direction of Portland between 5:25 a. m. and 4 p. m., unless this service can be secured.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

(As They Should Be)

James L. Henderson, who left our town to make his fortune in a certain nearby city, spent last week end with his parents. No doubt he borrowed the money for his return railroad fare.

Maggie Quinn, who lives on Forest Street, presented her husband with a bouncing baby boy. Maggie now has about four too many. It will not be long before the town will be called upon to dip into their poor fund for the Quinns.

A bridge party was held Thursday night at the home of Mrs. Kemps. It was just a common party that no one gives a darn about, but Ma Kemps insists that she will cancel her subscription to this paper if we do not give her the necessary write-up.

Another wedding took place at the Methodist church last Tuesday. Jack Fergusen at last succeeded in capturing one of Bill Johnson's daughters, and Bill dug into his pocket for the necessary flowers, dress suits and music. It is the first time either of the young people have been inside of a church for five years. To the editor it seems darn queer that the youngstrs of today have decided that Heaven is a myth, and yet they always want to buzz around a church when they are married, and get toted there when they die.

John Bless, our new selectman, will probably be fully as crooked as the chap whose term is just finished. We only elected him by 46 majority, which shows the general public agrees more or less with the editor.

We have on file six notices of dances, bridge parties, and other social events recently held in certain homes of our town. As the owners of these homes are six of the 482 citizens who have not yet paid their subscription for the current year, we cannot give the space required for details of these events.

Jones and Black are advertising a special sale of over-stuffed furniture. We personally saw the moths this morning and understand why there has been such a reduction in price. Of course, it would not be ethical for us to say anything more.

Local Bank Consolidation

Total Resources Will Be $25,000,000

Bank Operates as Local Unit

The Norway National Bank and the Paris Trust Co. will soon consolidate with the Casco Mercantile Trust Co., giving total resources of $25,000,000. In the days of big business it is difficult for small banks to serve the large borrowers and it is pointed out that this union of forces will work for strength, soundness and better service.

The Casco Mercantile Trust Co. is one of the larged Maine banks with resources in excess of $22,000,000. It maintains four offices in Portland and additional offices in Buxton, South Berwick and Bridgton. The Norway National Bank with its office in Norway and the Paris Trust Co. with offices in South Paris and Buckfield have combined assets of about $3,000,000.

Under this policy each office will be operated as a local unit to take care of local needs and conditions. There will be added to the Board of Directors of the Casco Bank, prominent business and professional men in the communities served, who will act as a special local committee, much as the individual banks were operated by their own board of directors.

This will provide these communities with banking service under local management, but with the resources of the larger institution.

It is understood that Perley F. Ripley, President of the Paris Trust Co., Henry B. Foster, president of the Norway National Bank, and Walter L. Gray, Esq., who has been vice president of both banks, will serve on the special local committee and that additional members will be added from the present boards of directors. Thomas F. Smiley of Portland, formerly of Norway, is a director of the Casco Mercantile Trust Co.

With $25,000,000 behind the new banking institution, there is a strong guarantee of safety for depositors and personal service from a staff of able bankers, thoroughly acquainted with conditions of big business.

Henry Merrill's Class 13

Meeting in Albany, Sunday

Henry Merrill, with his Class 13 from Portland, is to be with the Albany church at Hunt's Corner, Sunday, June 21st at 11 o'clock, standard time.

Here is a chance to combine a day's outing and a fine religious service in one. Take a picnic dinner and enjoy the day with your family in the midst of the beauties of the Albany Hills and hear one of the great radio speakers at the same time. The ladies of the church will furnish a drink to help out with your dinner.

Oxford County United Parish invites all, far and near, to join with them and Mr. Merrill in this service. There will be no other services in the Parish that day.

FREE MOVIES FRIDAY NIGHT

The free movie show in Norway Opera House, Friday evening, June 19, sponsored by the Norway Fish and Game Association will be highly entertaining and instructive. Several reels of film will depict actual scenes of wild life in remote corners of Maine and bring into a close up many rare animals most of us know little about.

James S. Stickney, Supervisor of Game Wardens, and Geo. J. Stobie, Commissioner of Inland Fisheries will describe the scenes and delate many interesting facts about the animal life in Maine's forests and streams. Curtain at 8 o'clock, daylight. Everything free.

MRS. E. CALVIN WALKER

Mrs. Hannah Jane Walker, wife of E. C. Walker, died at her home in Oxford Park, Tuesday, June 16, after a long illness. Mrs. Walker was born in Mansfield, Mass., Jan. 4, 1852, the daughter of Bradish and Jane (Fields) Williams, and the oldest of five children. She has lived in South Paris twenty-three years, formerly in Norway.

Beside her husband, she leaves a son and daughter by a former marriage, William F. Brown of North Norway and Mrs. Flora Arno of Oak Bluff, Mass., and a son, Guy L. Walker, formerly of Norway. Two sons, Delbert and Richard, passed away several years ago. Thirteen grandchildren survive, one being James Walker, who has made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Walker the past eighteen years.

The funeral at the home, Thursday, at 2 p. m., was conducted by Rev. G. Howard Newton of the Norway Baptist Church.

Burial was at Norway Pine Grove cemetery. There were many floral offerings from relatives, neighbors and other friends. She was devoted to her family and the past few years seldom went far from the home.

LOCAL BASEBALL ASSOCIATION

The directors of the Norway-Paris Baseball Association connected with the Pine Tree League went into session, Monday at 9:15 a. m. Meeting was held in the office of Robert B. Dow at Norway, who presided.

Ernest C. Murch was elected president of the board of directors and County Attorney E. Walker Abbott elected secretary.

The matter of securing a manager was discussed and two candidates for the position were considered. Guy Rowe, a well known player since the league was formed, was considered just the man to fill the bill. He was elected. Elmer Aldrich and E. Walker Abbott were chosen a committee to confer with the manager elect. A conference was held later in the day and Mr. Rowe accepted and given full powers in handling the team on the field and filling position.

E. C. Murch was chosen a committee of one to handle all publicity.

The directors point out that the Norway-Paris team is a community asset and should have the undivided support of every section in the Twin Towns. With this backing and punch the players can get into the game with a relish and hand out exciting baseball, that talks at the box office.

Norway-Paris opens the league with Lisbon Falls at the fair grounds this Thursday at 5:30 p. m. daylight time.

Members of the lower primary school gathered a big box of tinfoil and left it at the Weary Club for the crippled children's fund.

The scholarship prize of $25 in gold for Norway high school in the future will be known as the Harry M. Goodwin Scholarship Prize, which will be awarded each year. Albert Larance received the prize this year.

L. H. Cushman has a new oil truck for the distribution of Shell fuel in Norway, Paris, Oxford, Harrison, Waterford and Bridgton. His 25,000 gallon storage tank is on Beal street and handy to the spur track leading to the shoe shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howard and family of Rumford called on George H. Robertson, Sunday. Not finding him at home they gave up an extended trip and remained around the premises for their picnic lunch before returning to Rumford.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Andrews of Westbrook were guests, Saturday night of George H. Robertson. On Sunday the three went to Westbrook, where Mr. Robertson spent that day and Monday. He returned late Monday night.

Philip R. Greenleaf, who is attending Northwestern University at Chicago, is spending a few weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morrill L. Greenleaf. He will continue his studies at the university this summer.

Vacation Bible School

July 6th to July 17th

Each session will be divided into four periods, assembly, lesson, play and handcraft. The teaching staff will be voluntary and drawn from the Methodist, Congregational and Universalist churches.

Registration will take place on Monday, July 6th, at the Universalist vestry. The cost to the pupil will be neglible, only five cents each week.

LAKE TEMPLE PYTHIAN SISTERS

The last meeting of Lake Temple P. S., before vacation, was held Tuesday evening. Matters of business were closed, after which a social hour was enjoyed.

An invitation from the Temple in Stoneham to visit there Friday night was accepted. Officers and degree staff of Lake Temple will confer the degree on two candidates at that time. Hamlin Temple of South Paris will also be guests. Members desiring transportation may communicate with Mrs. Maybelle Bell or Mrs. Florence Faneuf.

A change has been made in the plan of entertaining the children. This year Children's Night will not be held, but the young folks will join with the Knights and Sisters in the annual picnic on July 12 at Tripp Lake. Mrs. Mary Kimball is chairman of the picnic committee.

Vacation is now on until the next meeting, Sept. 1.

Comment on Harrison Road

By a Traveler

We wonder why the road commissioner doesn't improve the Harrison road. There are places where a load of gravel and a little work would fix things up fairly good. Now, it is almost impossible to travel over comfortably. Why doesn't Norway tar what they have improved and hold it instead of building more every year and letting the other go back where it was. But we honestly think our road commissioner could do something to improve the Harrison road beyond the new road over as far as the Otisfield line.

We also would like to know what is the good of putting chloride on the road? Why wouldn't it have been better to use that money for tar? If you doubt these statements, take a ride over the Harrison road and see for yourself if you don't think that the other part of the town doesn't need a little work done on it instead of doing all in one place.

There is a lot of travel between Harrison and Norway and with the present outlets of good roads in both of the towns an amazing amount of travel would be benefitted by a good connecting road between the towns. As it is at present, the Harrison road is avoided just all it possibly can be. It is inevitable that some day there must be a good road put in there, connecting the two towns and the outlet roads.

First Annual Father and Son Banquet

Well Attended Function

About fifty fathers and fifty sons attended the First Annual Father and Son Banquet held at the Norway Grange Hall on Tuesday night. The affair was sponsored by the Universalist, Congregational and Methodist churches.

During the banquet, prepared and served by the ladies of the Norway Grange, an orchestra composed of Messrs. DeCoster, Hosmer, Fisher, Robinson, Akroyd, Stearns and Mrs. Nancy Longley, played several selections in march rythm. George Hill led the boys and their dads in singing a number of community songs.

Philip Stone acted as toastmaster and introduced Robert Hosmer, who spoke for the younger generation, and Hon. Donald B. Partridge, who spoke for the older.

Mr. Stone then called upon Rev. Christian Groezinger to introduce the principal speaker of the evening, Mr. Arthur Hall, associate secretary of the State Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Heald stressed the importance of the relationship between father and son. He first explained the fundamental basis of the Father-Son Movement as an attempt to bring about a right relationship between them. After giving credit to a Maine man for inaugurating the movement and to Newton D. Baker for popularizing it so that now it has spread all over the world, even in the orient, he showed that it had arisen because of a change in man's estimate of boyhood. The old idea was that a boy was always about mischief; the new that he is the hope of the world.

Mr. Heald concluded his entertaining and instructive address by enumerating some things dads might do for their boys and some things boys might do for their dads. He urged the fathers to (1) Set a good example; (2) Give more of their time to their boys; (3) Give definite instructions in living, especially in the wonderful process of life itself. He urged the boys to (1) Show affection toward their fathers; (2) Trust them; (3) Have some ambition.

All rose and sang "America" and departed with a better mutual understanding.

Ark Mariners

Took Journey on Rough Sea

The summer cruise of Oxford Lodge, No. 1, Ark Mariners, was sailed Wednesday evening, with a crew of more than 350. About twenty land lubbers were rushed down the gang plank to the deck and initiated into the mysteries of seaman ship. The wind kicked up a nasty surf and outside the reef a bad sea was running. Noah and his old salts brought the Ark through and landed safely on the mount without serious leakage.

A chicken supper in Masonic Hall at 6:30 followed by a parade to Norway Opera House, where the Ark was tied up, were the shore preliminaries to the sailing. One important feature of the street parade was Noah's Band of nine pieces, all members of the crew.

After going to Bangor, he placed Harry Nevers (Dr. Harry Nevers of Lawrence, Mass.) as a professional player. Drifting to California, Mr. Wheeler played several years in the Pacific Coast League, then went into business, but now retired. "Shorty" took the visitor to the Norway Country Club, he declared the golf course the best he has seen. Mr. Wheeler is touring Canada and the East and hunting up acquaintances along the route.

Norway High Graduation

Forty Graduated Last Thursday Evening—Alumni Banquet and Ball

Norway High School graduation was held Thursday evening at the Opera House which was filled to capacity with friends and relatives to the number of 750. The stage was decorated in the class colors, green and white, with the colors twined around the balcony railing. The class motto, "Building for the Future" was suspended over the front of the stage. The class flower, the white rose, was used profusely.

Members of the senior class, in caps and gowns were marshaled to their places on the stage by Samuel T. Favor class marshal.

The exercises opened with a selection by the school orchestra and prayer by Rev. Christian Groezinger of the Congregational Church.

The salutatory by Francis Eugene Hutchins was a resume of impressions while looking backward four years. "Success," he said, "can be measured in many different ways. One man's success is another's failure. Likewise does every man's ideal differ." He continued "There is no short cut to success. It requires hard work and the highest standards of character."

Class prophecy was given by Miss Elizabeth Conary and Samuel Tucker Favor by the aid of a new "chronofoloplatitude," a machine invented by Steve Cummings. Setting a combination of levers, inserting photographs, and turning switches, the operators were able to span the future for ten years and have a glimpse of each classmate as they may appear in 1941.

The class history was reviewed by Earl Stanley Pierce and the facts proved the students lived an active life during their journey from verdant freshmen to the graduation goal. The story was divided into acts, then sub-divided into scenes beginning on October 1, 1927, with the high school building a background for the interesting bits of character sketches that made history during the four years. Class activities like elections, receptions, debates, parties, contests, dramas and other happenings, were for amusement, sociability and school spirit.

Miss Violet Upton, who composed the class poem, read the lines which were reminiscent and carried a shade of sadness because the parting of the ways had been reached.

In the class will, Dennis Joseph Dullea in behalf of his associates, was very generous with goods, chattels and mighty fine intentions. The leading beneficiaries included the faculty and the janitors. Juniors were warned not to waste the coming year. Surplus energy and unusual personal traits of character were bequeathed to the sophomores. Pencil stubs, erasers, joke books, Western stories, etc., were passed along as a heritage from great men or great women, once owners of the collateral.

Miss Charlotte Elizabeth Longley gave the address to the undergraduates and impressed them with importance of duty and loyalty.

Class gifts were presented to the boys by Miss Arlene Rose Saleeby, and to the girls by Loren Thayer Brett. Impersonating a pair of Western bandits, who were supposed to have held up the evening mail train to steal gifts intended for another school, they brought their loot on the stage for distribution. Each token was suggestive and appreciated by the recipient.

Albert Joseph Lafrance, in the valedictory, used the class motto, "Building for the Future" for his subject. He said "Building for the future does not only mean that we are acquiring all the knowledge possible for our life's work, but that we are working to obtain the highest standard of honor and integrity." He continued, "Although genius may be the gift of the favored, integrity is never exclusive and is denied to none. A spotless character is the privilege of all."

Diplomas were presented by Congressman Donald B. Partridge, a former member of the school board. Edward L. Burnell, president of the Alumni Association, gave two prizes of $25 each to Mildred Gallant and Samuel Favor, for contributing most to the school in all ways for four years. Miss Gallant won points in the Glee Club, basket ball team, senior drama; was editor-in-chief of the Caduceus, secretary of dramatic club, vice president of commercial club, member of fair committee and was class odist; Mr. Favor was member of the football team four years, and manager one year; member of basket ball team, track team, baseball squad two years, captain of traffic squad, president of Student Council, member of dramatic club, and had part in senior drama, and pageant, also class part at graduation.

The ode, written by Mildred Maude Gallant, was sung. There were two verses and choruses.

Orchestra selection and recessional closed the formal graduation exercises.

Secretary—Mrs. Alice Lewis Skillings.
Treasurer—Percy Y. Fogg.
Executive Com.—Miss Carrie Tucker, Miss Hazel Bicknell, Mrs. Alice Schnuer Hammond, Fred S. Brown, Harold Millett, H. Knox Bickford, Mrs. Eleanor Brown Noble.

Mr. Burnell, as toastmaster, explained the reason for changing the date from August to Commencement week that the members of the graduating class might be definitely received into the association making them feel that they "belong."

Mrs. Izah Sanborn, representing the Norway Liberal Institute, gave a short history of the old school, and of the time when the Norway high school came into being. Verdal M. Sampson, the present principal of the high school, was the second speaker and he complimented the Alumni Association in its present movement of ushering the new graduates into the Alumni Association.

Miss Mildred Gallant and Samuel Favor, members of the class of '31 and the winners of the Alumni prize fund, expressed their appreciation to the association.

Hugh Pendexter told of his first years in Norway and his connection with the school, as a member of the school board and complimented the present corps of teachers.

Donald B. Partridge, also a member of the school board for a number of years, commended the kind of students who have graduated from the school. His stenographer, Miss Irene Lafrance, fitted herself at Norway High, and has been in his law office, the clerk of courts office, and now goes to Washington, for two years, as his private stenographer. Mr. Partridge has recently appointed a candidate for West Point from this year's class.

Albert A. Towne spoke of the need of paying the yearly dues, for in that way only, is the alumni prize fund made possible. All joined in singing the school song.

During the banquet the Troubadour orchestra from Portland played fine selections. Principal Sampson invited everybody to visit the new high school building and inspect the rooms, and especially the domestic science room, which was new this year.

The Alumni-Commencement ball followed, at the Opera House. The Troubadour Orchestra gave a short concert before the dance. In the receiving line were Principal and Mrs. Verdal M. Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. James N. Favor and Congressman and Mrs. Donald B. Partridge. The ball was a very pretty affair with decorations of the previous evening for graduation left in place. There were fourteen waltzes and fox trots on the order. The music was fine, both for dancing and for gallery patrons. Punch was served during the evening.

The patrons were Mr. and Mrs. Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. Partridge, Mr. and Mrs. Favor, Elizabeth Conary and Albert Lafrance. Sam Favor was floor manager with the class '31 his aids. Mrs. B. G. McIntire, Mrs. Glenn McIntire and Mrs. Kathleen McIntire Jillson went to the McIntire cottage at Papoose Pond, to put it in readiness for the summer. On their arrival they found there had been previous visitors and from further investigation it appeared there had been occupants all winter. The rooms on the lower floor were well decorated in white, which proved to be feathers from a feather bed in the sleeping room. It was not determined how many families of mice had found shelter, but they did find two umbrellas with good big nests in them, also the iron teakettle on the kitchen stove was filled to the brim with feathers, and every trip was made through the nose. In this nest were found four baby mice, and pop corn and rice in the bottom. In the bureau drawer were three quarts of the nest material, and so it was in many places about the rooms. In carrying the material for the nests, it was blown all over the place, and lodged on the walls, on the furniture, etc. The whole day was spent in cleaning the cottage.

O. W. Brown of Lynn Speaks On Fish and Game in Maine

Some of the attractions of the State of Maine for sportsmen and vacationists were described to members of the Lynn, (Mass.) Fish and Game Association at their meeting on Tuesday evening by Osman W. Brown, who hails from Norway in that state, and who is never backward about giving the village favorable publicity. He outlined some of the laws enacted during the past ten years for the preservation of fish and game life, and pointed out that as the result of legal protection given, the hunting and fishing is better now than ever.

Recent reports from Maine, Mr. Brown said, show there are more "drummers" in the Maine woods this year than at any previous time. Although that statement might lead one to believe that jazz bands are increasing, the "drummers" referred to were ruffed grouse, that well known and highly prized game bird of the forest, who does his courting by a series of drumming concerts that sound as if someone were actually beating a muffled drum at a rapidly increasing tempo.

As a result of this "music", which it makes with its wings, the partridge or ruffed grouse has acquired the reputation of being the "drummer" of the forest, the Lynn sportsmen were told, and added that observers who watched the alarming decrease of these magnificent birds in recent years now report that the partridges have staged an encouraging comeback, which is a good example of how sensibly closed seasons, if rigidly enforced by states, can help nature to again repopulate game areas in which food and cover are abundant.

The speaker also discussed the question of "Who owns the wild quail, pheasants, grouse and other wild game?"

"This is a puzzling question which has been raised many times by the 7,000,000 hunters and 18,000,000 fishermen in the United States," Mr. Brown said. "Down through the ages comes the answer—everybody owns the wild game, and at the same time nobody owns it. Title to wild game is held by the public, but vested in the state, which has regulatory rights over it, but no individual can own wild game. One may even raise game domestically, but the moment it is liberated or escapes, its legal status is declared 'wild game', and it becomes the property of the public, legal decisions show."

In tracing the legal status of wild game, Mr. Brown showed that in England the ownership of game was first vested in the King as an individual, but lated wrested from him and placed in the crown as a sovereignty, "to hold such property or wild game as the representative of, and in sacred trust for the people." This status was exacted from King John by the barons of Runnymede, in the Magna Charta in 1215.

Another story related by the speaker was that of Uncle Sam's postal regulations not only being flaunted, but violated and his mail carriers interfered with on one of the Maine routes, but so far nobody has gone to jail. The peppery wrens decided that a nice, white mail box in front of a farmer's home would make a dandy nesting box, so they boldly took it over and built a nest in it. Then they proceeded to make life miserable for the mail carrier, whenever he trid to do his work for Uncle Sam.

After the birds waged a pretty successful battle against the uniformed postman, the home owner rendered the conflict by leaving the hard fighting wrens in complete possession of the commodious mail box.

The Weary Club of Norway and some of the eventful times in the life of Mellie Dunham, aged fiddler of Norway, who at one time was the guest of Henry Ford, were outlined to the Lynn fishermen, who were invited to visit Norway and have some real fishing in Lake Pennesseewassee.

OUR FAVORITES TO WIN

The "Philadelphia Athletics",
Are on the march again.
With Connie Mack to lead them,
They are all stars in his train:
Their objective is the championship,
We hope they win again,
Earnshaw, Boley, Bishop,
Simmons, Fox, Cochrane.
They are leading all the other clubs,
Just watch their step a while!
They are driving on to victory,
To make their Connie smile.
And long before October first,
They'll be out in front again,
Walberg, McNair, Miller, Haas,
Rommel, Dykes, Cochrane.
McDonald, Mahaffey, Heving, Todt,
Are a part of the winning crew,
But never get the publicity
That some of the others do.
We are with you, Mr. Connie Mack!
And your club of fighting men,
We are watching every game, and hope
You cop the flag again.
JESSIE DUDLEY, East Brownfield, Me.

IF ONLY FOR A WHILE

Within my heart's a picture.
A face so sweet and fair,
I still hear your merry laughter
Ringing on the air.

Chorus

If I only could forget you
For just a little while;
Your winsome ways
Of other days,
Your tender little smile.
Your eyes so full of mischief
They did my heart beguile,
I wish I could forget you,
If only for a while.
To me you're still a memory
One I would forget,
I know that you've forgotten,
While I am loving yet.
—LILLIAN BARTLETT RICHARDS.

FISHERMEN

Handle undersized trout carefully—wet the hands, unhook the fish and put back in the water carefully.

Be careful of fire—a match dropped carelessly may destroy a valuable piece of timber—probably the watershed of your favorite trout brook.

Before building camp fires be sure you have the proper permit.

Public camp sites are available in almost all sections of the State where provisions are made for cooking food.

Be a good sportsman—Obey the laws.

WILD FLOWERS

The wild flowers are brightening the landscape, and the sides of the highways, and many people are gathering them to take home. Usually, however, wild flowers have wilted before home is reached and are thrown away. Had they been left they would have continued to bloom and to delight the eyes of all who pass by. Let us admire the wild flowers this summer, but keep hands off them.

Students from sixty towns and cities of Maine to the number of nearly one hundred have been in attendance at the Bryant & Stratton Commercial School, during the year just closed. Principal L. O. White reports a satisfactory and prosperous year, with a larger enrollment than that of the preceding year; students coming from three hundred sixty-nine high schools, academies, seminaries and private schools; sixty-seven business schools, junior colleges and normal schools; and eighty colleges and universities. The increasingly large number of college trained young men and women who enroll in the school for business administration and secretarial training is noteworthy; about twenty-five per cent. of the total enrollment of the school being college trained. During the last three-year period, one hundred thirty colleges and universities have been represented with as many as one hundred seventy-seven coming from a single university. The summer session starts Monday, June 29th.

Through the kindness of our friend and poet, Isabel Fiske Conant, we have received a copy of "Cape Cod Woman" by Ethel Ericson. It is a slim little volume containing about fifty poems and published by Fowler Wright in London. Ethel Ericson, a New York woman, has been instrumental in bringing poetry more and more before young people, especially those of high school age. She was very active, this year, in the work of National Poetry Week, the last of May, during which time a contest for prizes in poetry written by young people came to a close and nearly fifty of the best poems submitted were read. Mrs. Conant was one of the judges of the contest.

As to "Cape Cod Woman," it is a volume of poems wide in scope and appeal, delicate in many of the lyrics, and light at times in its fairy-like fantasies. The tradition of New England, of the Cape, that is difficult to let go, that many of us like to cling to, is beautifully portrayed in the title poem of this book of poems by Ethel Ericson.

Cape Cod Woman

Great blossoming boughs enfold her house
Like layers of old lace about old bones.
Somewhere within, a caged bird sings.
It seems to be remembering as it sings.
She has a music-box whose songs were
By every child a hundred years ago.
In one hushed room she tends her [illegible]
tables,
Where all their portraits live in [illegible]
family.
For though this keeper of an old [illegible]
Wander in traveller's words and [illegible]
pictures,
Glimpsing great crowds in noisy [illegible]
ies,
She will return to stir her waning [illegible]
Half-pitying, half-diverted, she will [illegible]
Her door against a riotous new [illegible]

In a number of poems, such as Redpoll, Everyman, Loneliness, and Bleak [illegible] find a certain philosophical tone. The poem Loneliness is very beautiful in its lyric quality and in picture. In Retrospection, the poet finds her delight in memories rather than in the [illegible] houses and lots of ground that bring joy to other men. "Rather my memories and the rainy sky."

The poems in "Cape Cod Woman" are so varied that it is unlikely that any a person who, picking up the volume to read, would not find some poem or poems to his taste. One travels from Cape Cod to Switzerland, Switzerland to China and—from China to Fairyland!

Ethel Ericson, like most of our poets today, is aware of Beauty [illegible] ty that is in everyday life and living, whether it be in nature, in the country, or in the city. The final poem of "Cape Cod Woman" is, perhaps, the best one in the book.

The Little Streets

I love to search the Little Streets
The streets of unemployment,
Where Beauty neighbours [illegible]
And leaves not any trace of [illegible]
I've found her in an old [illegible]
Peering through the dusty pane
With a faded crimson shawl
That brought me back to [illegible]
I've heard her in a doorway dark
Lull a child with sleepy [illegible]
Her mother magic [illegible]
And soothed away the [illegible]
I've watched her working [illegible]
To an organ's lilting tune
Like one who yearns to [illegible]
Is reconciled to [illegible]
Oh, Beauty in the Little Streets
With flying curls [illegible]
With glad child-eyes [illegible]
She nods and waves [illegible]
For Beauty reigns [illegible]
Where all men [illegible]
But only in the Little Streets
She lives like an Ideal [illegible]
Helen Hunt [illegible]

Interesting Doubles

It has often been noted and commented upon that persons have been seen who so much resembled others that they were taken for them, and stories have been written about such impersonations, which are not of the least of the works of fiction in merit and general interest.

The poem about the Shepherd of the Abbott of Canterbury, who looked so much like his master that old King John took him for that ecclesiastic and thus by his wits, was enabled to restore good feeling between them, is one of the most entertaining stories in verse in the English language.

The writer was struck a short time since in looking over an old magazine with the close resemblance of Charles F. Murphy, Sachem and Boss of Tammany, to our genial friend and good citizen, Mr. Leroy Spiller. The cut was shown to his able and active young partner, Mr. Lewis Fogg, and he said it was a good likeness of his worthy associate. And even Mr. Spiller, himself, was feign to admit that the picture of the great Sachem might be taken for him. Now this was no discredit to our good townsman, for Sachem Murphy was altogether a different Tammany Boss from Wm. M. Tweed, and when he died it was generally acknowledged that his twenty-two years management of affairs had been fairly commendable. Al. Smith paid him this tribute: 'He (Murphy) made of his life a lesson and an example to the youth of the country''.

Another cut in an earlier magazine of one E. W. Doty of Cleveland, who thirty years ago had figured in Ohio state politics to obtain the Initiative and Referendum and strongly resembled—particularly his sharp eyes—our worthy and popular Register of Deeds—Mr. Harvey Powers. One doesn't see in human head such a pair of eyes every day, nor a more able official, or a more faithful friend. There was not much in the magazine about this Westerner with the sharp eyes and it doesn't matter much what became of him or his career. His seeming double, Mr. Powers, is amply able to stand on his own merits without resembling any one and to increase the general regard for him as an official and citizen.

There is another case of a still closer resemblance Mr. Ai Twitchell of Fore Street, a pronounced follower of the Master, and Anton Lang, who took the character of the Saviour in the famous Passion Play, acted every ten years in a little town among the hills in Bavaria, whose cuts of the persons taking part in it have become quite familiar to the whole world. People say that the man from Fore Street with whiskers, is almost a perfect representation of Anton Lang, and this man's father when shown Lang's picture thought it was a good likeness of his son.

Another striking case is that of Mrs. Cora Belle Cummings and Miss Kate Field. One of the writer's friends, when shown the picture of Kate Field exclaimed: "That's a fine cut of Cora. How did her picture happen to be in the National Magazine?" When told that she had made a slight mistake she said what was true enough: "Well, any one who knows Cora might easily take this picture of Miss Field for her and she is worthy to have her's in the National or any other magazine." But what about Kate Field, for I suppose outside of the ranks of literary people she is not much known and is now pretty nearly forgotten? She was born in St. Louis, Mo., educated in Boston and Florence, Italy, but never married. She was a writer of some note and greatly charmed with Emerson and Dickens. The literary editor of the New York Tribune called her "brilliant" and her pen "facile," and Col. T. W. Higginson stated in The Independent that she had "extraordinary talents." And these were not all the praises she got by any means. Besides being a writer, she also lectured and was an actress. She died at Honolulu, May 19, 1896, at the age of fifty-six.

A close double of Ed. Cole is George C. Tyler, a theatrical manager of some years ago. Any one who knows our genial and native Norwegian, upon seeing off hand the picture of Tyler, would say at once that it was Ed. Cole. The resemblance is perfect. —C. F. Whitman.

Treed by Wolves

By R. L. Herrick

The snarling and yelping was coming on now, close to the edge of the clearing. Jack had nearly overtaken me now and called to me to put a buck shot shell in my gun and be ready as he had used all of his large shot. We had expected to find more small game than large and taken mostly fine shot from camp, there we had more buck shot, but of no use to us now. Now when one of a pack of wolves is shot his mates will halt in their chase long enough to devour him, then take up the trail again. They were now in hot pursuit and gaining rapidly. Jack had now overtaken me, so the way was clear behind for me to shoot into them when near enough, which was very soon. There must have been fifty of them, their snarling and yelping was frightful to hear. "Now," said Jack, "shoot and be sure and hit for if one goes down the others will not wait to see if he is dead or not.

I turned and fired into the dark mass of forms and was rewarded to hear a wild yell that told my shot had taken effect, then we sped on as fast as our legs could carry us as there was only one more dose of pills. This I slid into my gun as I ran. In a few seconds they were after us again, it would be useless to try to climb those huge pine trees, but suddenly I remembered the hardwood ridge, which I had noticed on my way over and which could not be far distant. Now I told Jack to make all speed and follow me; he was becoming nearly exhausted as he had been running much longer than I, but the hope of escape gave him new strength and we ran on faster than before. The pack were now close upon us and I fired my last shot into them just as we came in sight of the ridge, this caused another delay in their chase and we were on the ridge before they came on again. The limbs of some of the beeches were quite near the ground and just as the wolves were closing in on us again we had found each of us a tree we could climb, but we had no time to spare. I had no more than gained the lower limbs of my tree when the hungry brutes leaped against the trunk. I heard a cry from Jack and my heart stopped beating for I feared he had not succeeded as well as I, but on looking, I saw him safely beyond their reach, but one of them had leaped up and grabbed his leg as he was pulling himself up and had nearly made him lose his hold, but we were now both of us safe beyond their reach, but both of us had dropped our guns, which might have served us at such close range with fine shot, but there was now nothing we could do but cling to our refuge and shortly freeze and fall to the ground to be eaten, but this would not be so bad as our senses would be dulled, but that was rather poor consolation for us.

We were not very warmly clad and only had thin gloves on our hands which were wet and having become heated by our flight, we very soon began to feel the piercing cold, which was growing more intense as the night came on and the wind now blew a gale, which roared in the great pine trees like the surf on a rocky coast. Although we were but a few yards apart we had to shout to make each other hear. My gloves were frozen and my hands so benumbed that it was with difficulty that I kept my hold on the limb on which I was perched. Jack had a better seat in his tree for he had wedged himself between the trunk and a large limb which grew out a little and then up and this gave him support without the use of his hands, which he had folded inside his coat. I pulled the glove from one hand and threw it down, where it was caught and devoured by the nearest wolf, I then put my hand in my pants pocket and held by the other one until I could hold no longer, then threw the glove after the first and exchanged hands, first warming one and the other. The wolves had now settled themselves for a long wait, apparently with great faith that they would soon have a feast.

I had begun to think it would be a relief to be eaten than sit there and be frozen, when I had a sudden thought. I could see in the dim light another tree very like the one I was in and near enough so I thought I might slip over into it and a large limb of that tree grew out over a huge rock almost or quite touching the top of the boulders. If I could only get down on the ground behind the rock I would be on the side nearest camp and might reach there without being followed, even if I were missed after I had got started there would be Jack to wait for and he would be in sight. None of them would want to run the risk of losing his share by going in search of me. I weighed the matter carefully, then being almost afraid to speak of it, lest the wolves understand me. I shouted my plan to Jack, asking him to help me make my escape and made inquiries of him what I should find at the camp to make a torch from, that being my plan to return and frighten the wolves away with fire as our guns were both beyond our reach, ammunition would be of no use to us.

Jack was rather doubtful about my making my escape, but agreed to follow my directions the best he could and told me I would find old garments enough in the woodshed and an old kerosene lamp on a shelf in the camp. The latter I had noticed myself and that it had some oil in it. I had noticed that whenever one of us moved the wolves would assemble under that tree expectantly. I now got into a position so I could cling on with my feet and warmed both hands at once to get them thawed out enough to use in climbing the while studying my plan carefully. Next I began to work myself carefully over into the other tree, which if I had not been so benumbed would not have been difficult, but as it was I came near falling several times, but at last I was safely over and well out on the limb over the rock. This had of course called the whole pack's attention to me and now they began to try to climb upon the rock and at first I feared they would succeed, but the sides were too steep for them and they finally gave up the attempt and left me to see how the other coon was faring. Now I had told Jack, when I was ready to drop to the ground he must entertain the whole pack in some way so they would not miss my company, else there would be little hope for either of us.

Nearly all of them had gone under his tree now that I had stopped moving and I called to him to try and keep them there. He made a pretense to climb down and as they had all watched me so long as I had moved, I had no doubt they would him now, so I made haste to slip onto the rock and from there half slid, half tumbled, to the ground. The snow had drifted against the side of the rock and was soft, thus my landing made no noise and if it had it would not have been heard above the noise of the wolves and the roar of the wind. I did not stop to see if I had been apprehended, but ran as fast as I could, keeping behind the rock for some distance and then swerved into the road, I could see my way quite plainly, as the snow made the road and all objects show clearly.

The snow was falling thickly, but beneath the trees it fell slowly. I found the road and ran on and on not daring to look back, but as I heard nothing of the pack behind me my courage rose higher with every step. I reached the creek, splashed through it without looking for the stepping stones. I was now about one-half mile from camp and the remainder of the way was up grade, but steep, and I was glad of the exercise to start a circulation and now began to feel warm again.

The snow was two or three inches deep in the road and in open places, but beneath the thick pines the ground was scarcely white. At length when I began to feel as if I could not hold out to run much longer, I saw the camp and hugged myself with joy. If only Jack was safe and could hold on until my return all would yet be well. I reached the camp, found our matchbox which we had brought from home and left in camp on the table and by the light of a match found the lamp which I lit. There was still a good fire in the stove and I put in more wood.

Now I began a search for material for a torch of which I found plenty as Jack had said. There were old cast off garments left by the lumbermen and the lamp was half full of oil. I found an old fish pole handle in the shed; this I used to wind the rags to and some hay wire which hung across the beams in the camp, for a clothes line, I used to bind it on. When I had a bundle as large as a small wash tub, I blew out the lamp and by the light of the fire unscrewed the burner and poured the oil onto the rags. Now my device was ready I took the matchbox in my pocket and set out on a run for the scene. After crossing the creek I left the road and made a detour by the way which I had come, to approach behind the big rock. In going over a knoll I saw Jack still in the tree and heard the snarl of the impatient pack. I gained the shelter of the rock at the point I left and had not attracted any attention as yet. I now knelt by the rock to form a windbreak as that was on the windward side and lit my torch. At first it did not burn very good, but by keeping it in shelter for a few seconds it began to burn rapidly and with a yell that would have done an Indian warrior credit, I leaped out from behind the rock, and waving the flaming torch rushed straight at the snarling pack, which turned to see what had arrived so suddenly, then with yelps of fear turned and fled into the darkness of the forest. I now turned my attention to Jack, who had returned to his limb after helping me to get away, and now was almost frozen, so numb that I was obliged to climb up and help him down. I leaned the torch against a tree and its light helped us down and to find our guns, which had been buried in the snow and trampled over with many feet, they were not easy to find. When we had recovered them we took the torch and hurried toward camp as fast as possible for if the light should go out the wolves might return and over take us before we could reach camp. I had however taken some more buckshot from camp, but we would feel safer if the light lasted until we reached shelter. Jack grew warm enough to step lively before we had gone very far and before long we were safe in camp with the door fastened securely on the inside.

It is hardly necessary to say that we felt very thankful for our escape and present safety. The fire was burning briskly and the room was cozy. We had left the torch outside, leaned against a giant pine and its flame lasted for some time. After having dried our wet garments by the fire we became aware that we were very hungry.

Jack said he thought there must be some candles somewhere in camp as he and some of the other boys had been up there in the summr fishing and stayed a few days and had left some candles. After a search by the light of matches we found a small box containing several tallow candles and a candlestick. Now we were fixed for a light. We soon had our supper spread and as we had brought a little tea along and found a teapot in the camp box which served as cupboard, we melted some snow rather than go to the spring and soon had a nice drink of hot tea, which finished driving the cold out of our benumbed bodies.

NORTH WATERFORD

George W. Kneeland

After several years of failing health, George W. Kneeland, formerly of North Waterford, passed away suddenly at 9:45 p. m., June 9th, at his home at Berry Mills. He had been a sufferer of Bright's Disease, but attended to his business up to the time of his death. On Sunday he, with his wife and friends, were out riding, but Monday he seemed to be very weak and grew rapidly worse to the end. Two doctors attended him and a trained nurse and the loving care from his wife, but nothing could save him.

Mr. Kneeland was born in Sweden, Oct. 8th, '70, and has cared for himself from a boy. On May 9th, '96, he married Lillian G. Rice, daughter of the late Geo. B. and Harriet E. Rice, who has been a faithful wife and a great worker and is the only survivor. They have lived in Newry, Bethel, Waterford, Weld, Dixfield and came to Berry Mills some twenty-three years ago, where he went into business for himself, making dowels and spool stock, later forming a company known as George W. Kneeland Co., Inc., making caster wheels and candy sticks.

Mr. Kneeland was a member of the Knights of Pythias of Hanover, Masonic Lodge of Weld. Politically he was a Democrat.

Funeral was Saturday, with prayers at the home by Rev. Mr. Hatt of Dixfield, and services from North Waterford church at p. m., conducted by Rev. Mr. Hatt and prayer by Rev. Bull, singing by Mrs. Will Ray and Rev. and Mrs. Bull. There were many beautiful flowers. Burial at North Waterford. Bearers were Mell F. Knight, Virgil Littlefield, Harry Brown and Arthur Saunders.

Heard and Seen at Advertiser Office

Miss Winona Young of Norway will open a kindergarten school at the upper primary school on Monday, June 29. See ad. in this issue.

Dr. W. S. Unger, Osteopathic Physician, of Auburn, will be in Norway, Fridays of each week, located at Wm. F. Hall's at 129 Main street. See ad.

T. M. Huston has placed an ad in this issue calling attention to the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Norway Branch Railroad Company, Tuesday evening, July 7. See notice.

Mrs. Mabel Symonds of Noble's Corner, called Saturday afternoon to renew her subscription. Some weeks ago she gave up the paper, but as she expressed it: "Somehow I can't get along without the Advertiser, it has the real home news".

H. R. Roberts of Northfield, Vt., dean of Norwich University, called in Wednesday to bring greetings from Mr. Parsons, editor of the Northfield News, to F. W. Sanborn. Mr. Roberts and wife were on a tour through Maine.

Leroy E. Barker made us a call Wednesday and subscribed to the Advertiser. Mr. Barker is living in New York and employed by the New York Telephone, where he has been for three years and says he has a good job and likes. Mr. Barker is a graduate of Norway high school.

C. A. Austin of South Paris, formerly of Mechanic Falls, is recovering slowly from an auto accident that sent him to the hospital for a time. He made an auto call Monday, but remained in the car, being still dependent on a cane and not very frisky. In about two weeks he expects to reopen his auction rooms at South Paris and meet all comers.

E. B. Lane of Berlin, N. H., says: "According to my way of thinking next to a fish story is a wolf story, then a bear story, and you surely started a good one in last weeks Advertiser, keep 'em coming and the Advertiser will take the place of the best story papers of a few years ago. I have in mind the Youths Companion and some other good magazines that have gone the way of all the world. The present Companion is no more like the old Companion than the Police Gazette is like the Zions Herald."

The American Legion at Bethel and the Oxford County Citizen are pulling together handsomely for the Indian Pageant on Aug. 3. That will be the Sesquicentennial of the last encounter with the Red Men in Maine, if not in New England. Lieut. Jonathan Clark's cabin was raided, Aug. 3, 1781, and prisoners were marched into Canada. Two scalps also were taken along by Chief Tomhegan and his painted henchmen. This story will be played up strong and considerable emphasis placed on the scalping knife, black gun powder and torch. The towns of Paris and Hebron are remotely connected with the celebration, for Mrs. David Marshall, who fled with her husband and two children from their clearing on the Sanborn farm, made their way to Lemuel Jackson's cabin on Paris Hill. She was the first white woman to tread the soil of Paris. They later settled in Hebron and reared a large family.

Sent in by a reader of the Norway Advertiser: "While talking with Mrs. Clarence Files of Stoneham, some time ago, she said she has a picture of a man once known as 'Crazy' Higgins. I think this may be the only one of its kind, as I have tried to fine some one for a long time who had a picture, but have been unable to until I talked with her. I can remember him when a little girl; he would come to our place and stay a few days and then go away and sometimes it would be months before you would see him again. I am planning to call and see his picture sometime when in Stoneham as I know Mrs. Files will be pleased to show me. I am writing this thinking this may interest some of the readers of the Advertiser, as Mr. Higgins traveled all over the State of Maine, and was known to all as 'Crazy' Higgins."

W. E. Waldron of Woodfords sends us the following poem, "A Brace of Epitaphs" which he found when looking over some old papers of the late Solomon Winslow of Paris:

A Brace of Epitaphs

On An Old Maid

Here lies a poor, forlorn old maid,
Whose charms, long ere her teeth, decayed:
Whole years in solitude she sat,
Forgot by all, except her cat.

In youth, believe it, she was fair—
In wit and grace and beauty rare:
A grave old bachelor was slain,
Who sought her hand and heart in vain.

As she grew old, and lost her power,
Her temper, with her age, grew sour:
She scolded all her friends to death—
She's silent now for want of breath.

On An Old Bachelor

Here lies the veriest wretch forlorn,
Wounded by love, and killed by scorn:
The man who courted this old maid,
When in the charms of youth arrayed.

He neither drank, nor chewed, nor smoked,
Unknown, through this dull world he poked:
Without a dog, or cat, or wife,
To cheer the loneliness of life.

Scorned by the sex, he was not blind
To any charms of woman-kind;
His soul is fled—his sins forgiven—
He's wooing angels now in heaven.

Marian Gibson George (Mrs. Faber H. George) of 1366 Broadway, Alameda, California, formerly of Norway, sends us the following:

"Dear Folks: I am enclosing a copy of a letter I just received from Holman Day, which I thought would be of interest to many Norway people, as he is a well known character throughout the state of Maine.

"Just a word of explanation regarding the letter, will say that Holman Day is broadcasting his tales of adventure on the ocean each Saturday morning over radio station KPO in San Francisco, California. This is a very fine program of good cheer, good thoughts, etc., broadcast every morning from eight to nine o'clock and is known as the "Shell Happy Time." It is conducted by Hugh Barrett Dobbs and this is the 'Hugh' about whom he speaks in his letter.

"After Holman Day's first broadcast I sent him a word of greeting from a former 'State of Mainer' and the following letter I received in reply.

"With kindest regards to all and before this reaches you, several members of our family will have reached Norway so we are all there much in thought, if not in person.

"San Francisco, Calif., June 7th. 1931. My dear Mrs. George: Mighty glad to get your hello. The Oxford Bears are truly Maine's staunchest citizens. When I worked on the Lewiston Journal, I was often in Oxford County.

I have a vivid recollection of covering the Norway fire. I was up all night and turned in seven or eight columns by nine o'clock the next morning, working single-handed on the whole event—and got a raise of salary for the job. So, in spite of the disaster, the ill wind blew a few extra dollars my way. By friend Hugh's request I stress my Maine dialect a bit extra and I'm glad you get it as it's meant.

Sincerely,
(Signed) Holman Day.' "

Boston Peace Jubilee

Alma Pendexter Hayden

Sixty-two years ago this month, I attended the great "Peace Jubilee" with my father. It was held in Boston and the great Colliseum covered twenty acres of ground. In shape, it seemed to me like a huge tray, the two sides and ends covered with seats and descending to the center space. I have a program for the day father and I were there. It is dated "Friday, June 13th, 1869".

There were one thousand voices in the chorus. The celebrated Gilmore directed the orchestra and led to the front of the stage the favorite soloists of the day. At the top of the program is printed: "Let us have Peace".

I have never known what influence this Jubilee had in promoting peace, but it seems to me that our country should be fully prepared to protect itself by air and sea.

The ancient hatred of Europe will keep its countries fighting as they have for centuries. Why should the U. S. be so polite as to send over two million men and billions of dollars?

Why do we wish the League of Nations to tell us what we may do?

Is that the independence of our ancestors bought with their blood?

Is this supposed to be a "free country"?

Not unless we beware of "foreign entanglements".

So, in the words of 1869, "Let us have Peace"—by being fully equipped to protect our own land and by keeping out of the turmoil of Europe.

THOSE NORTH WATERFORD BIRDS

By D. Cromett Clark of Somerville, Mass.

I wonder if the strange birds reported by your North Waterford correspondent in the Advertiser of June 12 can be starlings. The mention of the beak as being "very long" would indicate otherwise, but a starling's beak is slender and looks longer than it is. Starlings are green-black to purple-black in color with tiny buff spots near the feather tips. They are slender and an inch or more shorter than a robin, though they look fully as long. The beak is bright yellow color.

The starling is a European bird that was introduced into this country at New York city about thirty-five years ago. It has become plentiful in Boston and vicinity, and is somewhat of a nuisance, driving away our better native birds, but is not so bad as the English sparrow. It nests in holes in buildings and trees. It walks along the ground, like a robin, but does not pull up worms.

If it has spread to North Waterford, the fact is rather surprising, for their travels have been slow from place to place, and the Oxford County climate is hardly to their liking in winter.

Some careful observer can readily tell if the starling really is at North Waterford, but don't undertake to have a positive identification except by some person who really has studied birds.

Note—Starlings have been found in several places in Oxford County the past few years, including Norway and South Paris.

Geo. F. Hill informs us that golfing is not his strong hold. His name has been associated with the names of Ralph L. Sturgis and Frank E. Decoster as tee experts at the Norway Country Club. From now on the three withdraw from golf, but may be found around the eatables, ready for fun, money or doughnuts.

Your correspondent for Albany Line tells of some birds nesting in the cupola of E. K. Shedd's barn. We think they are grackles, as a number have lived around our buildings this winter. At times we would see flocks of them in one tree and they would sometimes try to get into the barn. Only recently have any been seen in this part of the country. They do a great deal of damage, such as destroying the nests of other birds and killing the young ones, etc. In color, they are a bronze black and have a large, nearly white bill.

COLDEST AND WARMEST ICE-BOX SPOTS IMPORTANT TO KNOW

Where is the coldest place in the refrigerator? In the side icer type the most frigid spot is directly under the ice chamber, where the cold air drops down. In the "overhead" icer the coldest spot is in the middle of the top shelf. Edna Cobb, Home Management Specialist for the Extension Service, University of Maine, says that milk and butter should be placed in these spots where it will get fresh, clean, cold air. Continuing, she said: "Since butter absorbs odors and flavors very readily it is best to keep it covered. Other delicate foods that belong in this coldest compartment are meat broths and moist cooked foods such as cereals, custards and cream sauces.

"Uncooked meat should have the next coldest compartment, then eggs, cooked vegetables and left-overs, (provided they do not contain milk), fruits and vegetables, unless they contain strong odors, when they should be placed high up in the food chamber where the cold air current strikes them just before it returns to the ice chamber.

"This refers to the "side-icer" type. In the "overhead" icer, foods with strong odors belong near the side walls on the lower shelves where the air currents are traveling quickly to the ice chamber. In an "over-head" icer the warmest place is usually at the extreme edge of the bottom shelf.

"Obeserve two C's, 'cold' and 'clean' and you will get good service from your refrigerator provided it is a good one to start with. Even the finest one will not give satisfaction unless kept cold and clean.

"It is of prime importance to keep the refrigerator well iced whenever the volume of ice falls below one-half the capacity of the ice chamber the walls of the refrigerator become warm and when new ice is put in it must do double duty thus wasting the ice, to say nothing of taking chances in conserving food.

"Do not open the doors any oftener than is absolutely necessary. Every time they are opened, a rush of warm air enters and makes the temperature uneven. When removing several articles, place them on a tray, so that the door will not have to be opened so many times during meal preparation. This reduces steps also.

"The refrigerator alone will not keep foods sound and wholesome unless it is scrupulously clean. In the first place let no dirty thing, either food or container go into it. Wipe off the milk bottles, wash lettuce and celery when it comes from the market. In spite of all precautions, however, refrigerators need a thorough cleaning, weekly, including doors and door sills, and drain pipe. Soda dissolved in cool water (about one tablespoonful to four quarts of water) makes a good cleansing agent as it is odorless, helps to remove stains that have been left from spilled food, and sweetens the air. After washing, wipe the refrigerator thoroughly with a clean, dry cloth."

BUSINESS ADVANCING

Harvey S. Firestone, the tire manufacturer, reports profits of his company for the first six months of its current fiscal year which are double the earnings of the entire year of 1930. The earnings are sufficient to cover the company's dividend requirements on both its preferred and common stock.

To what extent the Firestone company's record is a sign of the times rather than an individual achievement remains to be seen when the six months' statements of other idustrials become available.

The showing of the Firestone company is significant in that it represents big cities and small cities, villages and farms. The tire companies sell their product everywhere and to every economic class.

The tire companies have felt the depression perhaps more keenly than the manufacturers of other necessities, and now the first actual proof that business has quit the bottom and started the upward climb for which everyone has been waiting comes from one of these tire companies. The Firestone report is more than a hopeful sign; there is no theory in all of this. It is good business. Good business is the only term in which good business can be started—that is, it's money earned.

OXFORD—FORE STREET

Answer to Item Regarding Patriotism—Guests at Mrs. Cummings'—Mrs. Robinson Returned Home.

Reading the item concerning patriotism and men not showing proper respect for our flag, your correspondent writes the following lest we despair of man's nobility, even. This man is a busy one and probably did not attend the public exercises mentioned, but when he noticed how high the water had risen in the recent rains, his thoughts turned quickly to sheep pastured on low lands and immediately he turned homeward, took his son of seventeen summers and went to the intervale, where 'twas found that deep water was between them and the sheep. They wasted no time to hunt up a boat, but stripped off their clothes and waded through the cold water to where the sheep were, made sure of their comfort and waded back. The lad suffered no ill effects of the cold water plunge. The man of mature age tryed to make light of the cramps suffered that night and felt well repaid for their job. You may say "That's business. A man should look after the wellfare of his." Sure enough he should. But how about this? A young robin had fallen from its nest in the big pine tree, far out on a slender branch too slight to hold the weight of a ladder. Was it the God who notes the fall of a sparrow that put the thought in this man's heart that he could back his truck under that limb and by standing on the very top on tip toe could just stretch his arm that high? Well, that was what he did much to our amazement, who beheld the feat. The writer contends such deeds are what hold our faith in the goodness of mankind and that noble men live even though Abraham Lincoln is a long time dead. "Salute the flag" by all means, but the everyday life is what counts after all.

We hear that Mrs. Mary Allen, once of this street, is laid up with a sprained ankle and just as the family were to move into Maine from New Hampshire, where they have been through the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Brown attended the Norway high graduation and also the alumni banquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Waterhouse, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Waterhouse and daughter, all of West Paris, spent the day, Wednesday, with Flora Cummings. The only unpleasantness of the day being the spilling over a can of yellow paint. No real harm done, nobody hit and all left to tell the story, except the people present, is the yellow splotch left on the piazza floor that do the best he could Fred could not remove, even with sack cloth and ashes though thoroughly worked. Fred declares he'll paint the whole floor and expressed a wish to paint the house outside fire red! Don't ask me why, ask him.

Mrs. Addie Robinson of Norway finished work for Mrs. Twitchell and Mrs. Brown, Friday, going home with Mr. Robinson, who came for her that night.

The public seems to have broken loose since the six days of rain, for autos have been swishing to and fro continuously night and day. Some so swiftly one would think a fire needed their quick service. If it is hard times this hard road is tested to its capacity.

Can't write any glorious tidings of wild strawberries, though its time for them. What damage the frost did to those in full bloom seems disastrous.

It's awful to hear dogs howl o' nights, but when one complains that birds "screech", that's the worst ever.

ASSASSIN
A Drinker of Hashish!
In eleventh-century Persia, a secret order was founded by Hassan ben Sabbah, indulging in the use of the Oriental drug hashish, and, when under its influence, in the practice of secret murder. The murderous drinker of hashish came to be called hashash in the Arabic and from that origin comes our English word assassin!

Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks cost less to operate
CHEVROLET
It is a matter of record, among more and more large fleet operators, that Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks give a lower transportation cost than any other truck of equal capacity in the market.
These firms are finding, through experience, that Chevrolet sedan deliveries are capable of 20 miles or better, to the gallon of gasoline; that Chevrolet 1½-ton trucks are making fuel records which are relatively just as high. That it costs very little to keep Chevrolet trucks in first-class working order. That Chevrolet service charges on both parts and labor are exceptionally low. That the active life of Chevrolet trucks extends well past the 50,000 mileage mark.
To place your hauling on a minimum-cost basis—and keep it there—put Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks to work. A wide variety of Chevrolet-built bodies is now available. And delivered prices of Chevrolet trucks, complete and ready for work, are based on low chassis-cost and low body-cost, plus only reasonable charges for handling and financing.

AUNT BETSY'S LETTER

Dear Barbara and Lenona: Greetings! Was very pleased with your nice letters. Barbara is a wide awake young lady to be entering high school this fall—and is only 13 years old! I am glad to hear you are a 4-H girl, Barbara. So many worthwhile subjects are taken up by the 4-H Clubs and aids the young folks in their life later on.

For all the duckings that Lenona and her classmates had at Tripp Lake, I'll bet they had a wonderful time! I guess all the schools for miles around went on a picnic and to the movies on the last day of school. Take more than a thunder shower to dampen the spirits on a picnic.

Now, we have two from the Yates family! Isn't that nice? Send us your birthdate, Lenona. I was up in Bryant Pond last week. In fact, within four days I passed through the towns where live most of our Column Cousins, Welchville, Bryant Pond, Hartford, East Sumner, Harrison. My work carries me around a greater part of the time. Every girl and boy I see I wonder if they belong to the Corner. You folks better be tagged and then Aunt Betsy will recognize you! Before the summer is over I plan to visit some of the cousins. I hope Thelma Andrews has a slice of her nice chocolate cake waiting for me!

I expect the 4-H girls are thinking about canning now. We found any amount of wild strawberries last week. Boy But didn't they taste good! And on June 12, the boy here found a blueberry. If there is one berry I like its blueberries. Yum! Yum! That reminds me, have any of you girls a good recipe for blueberry cake? I have never had any success with one in my life. I have eaten some that simply melted in my mouth. I'll give a prize to the ones who send me a good recipe. You young folks will simply have to get to work and show me how to cook! You see when I was young there weren't any 4-H clubs to help us learn the rudiments of keeping house—and half of us never learned to cook until we were married! So I'll be awfully much obliged if you will help me!

Well, I won't write any more now. Thank you a lot for your letters, Barbara and Lenona and would like to hear from you again.

Oh, I nearly forgot—Carroll Yates of Bryant Pond, Me., R. F. D. 2, will celebrate his 13th birthday on June 25. So if your arms aren't long enough to reach up to him and pull his ears for him, just send him a card! Best wishes to all.

—Aunt Betsy.

Dear Mr. Sanborn: I wrote you two weeks ago and sent in my list of words that I got from the word Advertiser. I am going to send in a letter to you this week. First. I wish to thank you for the paper you sent me. I hope more of the boys will write to the Children's Corner now school has closed. I go in for a swim at the lake here at Harrison village most every Saturday with a couple of boy friends.

Last year I used to go horse back riding a lot as dad had a good horse for me to handle, kind and gentle. He was a chestnut color, small. He was a pretty horse; we called him Don, but we lost him. He burned in the fire at Otisfield last December, 1930; also our cow.

Last year I went with my parents down to Brunswick with our friends, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Darling for over the 4th of July. Thirty in all went out on the water in Mr. Darling's big motor boat. this was at Cundy's Harbor. We all landed five miles out on Ragged Island, had a great feast there and enjoyed that day. Some islands we passed there out on our way were just white with sea gulls. I saw one of the sea gull's eggs. Out at the cove there the men have great sport shooting birds, ducks, and etc., when the law is off.

I hope it's good weather for this 4th of July. They asked the boys and girls to send in their birthday date. I am eleven years old July 13, 1931, address J. Norton Day, Harrison, Me., Rt. 3, care Will Day. Hoping to hear from some other members of the Children's Corner. Best wishes to all. Sincerely yours, J. Norton Day, Harrison, Me., Maple Ridge, R. F. D. 3, Care Will Day.

West Paris, Maine, June 9, 1931. Dear Aunt Betsy and Cousins: I live within sight of Mt. Mollyockett, in Woodstock, which was named for the Indian woman, Molly Ockett. She had a camp on this mountain. She was known as a St. Francis Indian. She was described as a young, pretty squaw. She dressed in Indian costume and wore a pointed cap.

Molly Ockett was a great hunter, often going into the woods killing moose and bears. When she was older, she tramped far and wide all over this territory, curing the sick with roots and herbs. For this she would take only one penny. She put this into a bag which was tied around her neck by a string, on account of this there was an old saying, "Molly Ockett lost her pocket."

Molly Ockett was a great traveller. Her favorite tramp was from Andover to Paris Hill. The following story is told by all the old residents of Paris and Andover.

Once in mid-winter, Molly Ockett started from Andover to Paris Hill. The traveling was hard and when she reached Snow Falls, she was so tired that she sought shelter. No one would take her in.

Then Molly Ockett cursed the place and its people and said that no business or the people should ever prosper. Then she kept on until she reached Paris Hill, where she was offered food and lodging by one of the finest families in the state of Maine, although there was a sick baby in the house. Then Molly doctored the baby and blessed it and said it would live and become a great man. Years afterwards he became vice-president of the United States. His name was Hannibal Hamlin.

Molly Ockett also claimed that in the time of small pox, in 1755, when the few remaining Indians fled to Canada, they buried some gold in the town of Paris. About 1860, a man going across lots noticed part of a trap chain hanging from the crotch of an elm. The rest of it had grown into the tree. Then this legend was remembered, people started to dig for gold. None was found, but from that time on, the place was known as Trap Corner.

Molly Ockett was a christian. Her last days were spent in Andover. She died there at a Mr. Bragg's, when she was over a hundred years old. She was buried in Andover and if one should go there, they would see on her stone:

Molly Ockett, baptized Mary Agatha, died in the Christian faith, August 2, 1816. The last of the Pequaketts.

—Madge W. Morgan.

Age 11 years, born May 24, 1920.

Dear Aunt Betsy: I am writing a little story for the children's corner, perhaps some little tot may love to hear it.

I live on a farm, not far from South Paris. I have a little granddaughter, named Dorothy. She is only three years old and has lived with us most of the time since she was born.

She loves all the animals on the farm and when we had a little bossie calf come to us, Dorothy wanted her grandpa to take her out to the barn every day to see the bossie and let her pat it and have a ride on his back, but one day a man came and bought the bossie and took him away and when she saw her bossie going away in the cart, oh, how she did cry and cry. She wanted her bossie to come back, so we had to promise her we would find her another one.

One day she moved, with her papa and mama, out to the village, to live, and every time she came down to see her grandpa and grandma, the first thing she would say would be, "Have you found another bossie for me?"

One day when she came, we had another bossie and Grandpa took her out to the barn and showed her the new bossie. After looking it over and patting him, she put her arms around her grandpa's neck and said, "Now grampa don't you let John Penley have this bossie, will you?" Grampa said, "No, we won't let John Penley know we have got another little bossie," so every time she comes down now she will always ask if John Penley has "got my bossie."

The next time I will tell you about her little dog, "Betty."

—From Grandmother.

LOVELL CENTER

Graduation Exercises—Visitors in Town

The Lovell grammar school graduation was held at the Town House, Friday evening, June 12th, when seven boys and one girl graduated, Norman Allen, Carlton Merrill, Thomas Sherburne and Lucretia Hutchins from the village school, Albert Libby and Lewis Davis from the Center school, Harold Hill from North Lovell and Arlington Files from Slab City were the graduates. The class motto was "Ever Onward" and the Class colors, old rose and silver. Program:

Invocation ..... Rev. R. A. Brandon
Piano Solo ..... Yvonne LaRoque
Address of Welcome ..... Lucretia Hutchins
Essay, "Visit of American Flag" ..... Thomas Sherburne
Rec., "Banner Betsy Made" ..... Harold Hill
Song, Many Flags of Many Lands ..... North Lovell School
Rec., "Flag O'er Every Schoolhouse" ..... Norman Allen
Rec., "Returned Maine Battle Flags" ..... Lewis Davis
Violin Solo ..... Thomas Sherburne
Presentation of Gifts ..... Albert Libby
Presentation of Diplomas ..... Harry McKeen, Chairman School Committee
Class Song, composed by Arlington Files ..... Essay, "Our Country" ..... Carleton Merrill
Song, America the Beautiful ..... Benediction ..... Rev. W. I. Bull

Much fun was enjoyed in the presentation of gifts speech by Albert Libby, which was as follows: "Tonight on the eve of separation I am presenting these gifts, that we might keep in mind the fond memories of our happy school days. Without a doubt Lewis will recall how hard it is to study with hair in his eyes, and I am sure that his supply of "slickum" must be getting low. I will present this new box and I hope that it will add to comfort during high school days. Every time the mail man has to shift coming up the hill the children at Slab City know that he must have another seed catalogue for Arlington Files, that's what most of his mail consists of. We know that Arlington isn't so keen on planting as he is on selling. We therefore present him with a package of seeds in case he should forget to keep any for his own garden.

Harold Hill, I heard that you kept a harmonica at school this year and played on it during most of your spare time. I thought I would give you this new one as the other must be nearly worn out. Norman Allen, you have always been a genious in solving the many difficulties which have arisen at school, especially where mechanical knowledge was required, but "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy", so kindly accept this top, which is always ready for a spin. Carlton Merrill, as you can never resist the temptation of looking out of the window whenever an airplane flies over, I am presenting you with this one, and I sincerely hope that in the near future you will become a second "Lindy".

Lucretia Hutchins, when you enter Fryeburg Academy next fall, I feel sure that if history is included in the curriculum, you will enjoy this package of dates, and hope that they will prove "that a friend in need is a friend indeed". Thomas Sherburne, we have never been able to understand your lack of interest in athletics and have often wondered if the exercise was too strenuous, especially in baseball, so Thomas I am presenting you with this ball, which I can assure you with proper care will always return to its owner."

Over one hundred and seventy-five were present to enjoy the exercises. A dance followed, music by a three piece orchestra. The village school has earned enough to buy a piano. School here closed Friday, June 12th, after a term of eight weeks, taught by Beulah Kennedy from South Portland. A picnic was held on the shore of Kezar Lake.
